1. What are the different types of membership in UNWTO?

The United Nations World Tourism Organization (UNWTO) is a specialized agency of the United Nations that promotes responsible, sustainable, and universally accessible tourism. To ensure broad participation, UNWTO offers different types of membership.

Full Members: These are sovereign states that are members of the United Nations. Full Members have voting rights in the General Assembly and play a key role in policy and decision-making.

Associate Members: These are non-sovereign territories or regions that are not responsible for their external relations but have authority over tourism matters. They can participate in UNWTO activities but do not have voting rights.

Affiliate Members: These include private sector companies, tourism organizations, educational institutions, NGOs, and local authorities. They contribute expertise and innovation but do not have voting rights.

2. Who qualifies as a Full Member of UNWTO?

Full Membership in UNWTO is open to sovereign states recognized internationally. To qualify, a country must be a member of the United Nations, accept the UNWTO Statutes, apply formally for membership, and receive approval from the General Assembly.

Full Members have voting rights, can influence global tourism policies, and gain access to research, technical assistance, and training programs. Examples of Full Members include Spain, France, India, Germany, and Japan.
